Margaret's key strengths are strategic and business planning, commercialization, with the particular ability of clarifying objectives and working with others to achieve them. She has a strong track record of increasing revenue and turning around deficits.

Having worked in commercial organizations, state and local government and in the Not-for-Profit environment, she has the ability to relate across the divides of the commercial, government and NFP world, introducing new approaches to problem solving and issue management and resolution.

It was in part due to this ability that while CEO of Save the Children Australia, Margaret was awarded the NFP CEO of the Year and the organization was awarded Best Practice Not-for-Profit organization in Australia.
